JANE DOE,

Plaintiff,

v.

RICHARD ROE,

Defendant.

Case No. 2:12-cv-01644-MMD-GWF

ORDER

(Defendant's Motion to Dismiss
– dkt. no. 25;
Defendant's Motion to Postpone all
Discovery and Initial Discovery
Proceedings Pending Motion to Dismiss
– dkt. no. 28)

I. SUMMARY

Before the Court are Defendant Richard Roe's Motions to Dismiss (dkt. no. 25) and to Postpone Discovery (dkt. no. 28). For the reasons discussed below, the Motion to Dismiss is granted in part and denied in part, and the Motion to Postpone Discovery is denied.

II. BACKGROUND

Plaintiff Jane Doe alleges that she and Defendant Richard Roe began an intimate relationship in March 2010. (Dkt. no. 1 at ¶ 3.) At the beginning of the relationship, both parties resided in California. In early 2011 Defendant moved to Nevada. (Dkt. no. 32-1 at ¶¶ 3, 6.)

Plaintiff alleges that at all times during the relationship, Defendant was knowingly afflicted with Herpes Simplex Virus II ("HSV II"), and that Defendant actively and knowingly withheld information concerning his venereal disease during the course of the parties' relationship. (Dkt. no. 1 at ¶¶ 8-9.) Plaintiff alleges that she contracted HSV II from Defendant. (Id. at ¶ 10.) Plaintiff avers that she would not have engaged in sexual intercourse with Defendant had she known that he had HSV II, but that Defendant did

1 not inform her about the disease until after her positive diagnosis in December 2010.
2 (Id. at ¶¶ 10-12.)

3 Plaintiff filed the instant action on September 19, 2012, alleging that Defendant
4 willfully transmitted HSV II to her. (Dkt. no. 1.) Plaintiff asserts claims of negligence, 5 intentional infliction of emotional distress (“IIED”), and fraudulent misrepresentation.
6 She requests both compensatory and punitive damages. (Dkt. no. 1 at 5.) Although 7 Plaintiff brings this action in Nevada District Court, her negligence and fraudulent 8 misrepresentation claims are based on California Health and Safety Code § 120290, 9 which prohibits the willful transmission of an infectious disease. (Dkt. no. 1 at ¶¶ 16, 29.)

10 Defendant filed his Motion to Dismiss for failure to state a claim pursuant to 11 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6). (Dkt. no. 25.) Defendant alternatively moves 12 for summary judgment under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(d), which allows courts 13 to consider matters outside the pleadings presented on a 12(b)(6) motion and to 14 construe the motion as a motion for summary judgment. The parties submit several 15 documents to their Motion and Opposition, including affidavits and e-mail 16 correspondence. However, as discovery has not commenced in this action, the parties 17 have not had an opportunity to prepare the documents and arguments necessary for a 18 complete motion for summary judgment and opposition thereto. The Court declines to 19 construe the Motion as a motion for summary judgment.

20 Defendant argues that Plaintiff’s claims should be dismissed because: (1) 21 Plaintiff’s claims for negligence and IIED are time-barred by the statute of limitations; (2) 22 Plaintiff has not pled plausible allegations to support a claim for negligence or IIED; and 23 (3) Plaintiff’s fraudulent misrepresentation claim does not comply with the heightened 24 pleading standard set forth in Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9(b).

25 III. LEGAL STANDARD

26 A court may dismiss a plaintiff’s complaint for “failure to state a claim upon which 27 relief can be granted.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). A properly pled complaint must provide 28 “a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief.”

1 Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2); Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007). While 2 Rule 8 does not require detailed factual allegations, it demands more than “labels and 3 conclusions” or a “formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action.” Ashcroft v.
 4 Iqbal, 556 US 662, 678 (2009) (citing Papasan v. Allain, 478 U.S. 265, 286 (1986)).
 5 “Factual allegations must be enough to rise above the speculative level.” Twombly, 550
 6 U.S. at 555. Thus, to survive a motion to dismiss, a complaint must contain sufficient 7 factual matter to “state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.” Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 8 678 (internal citation omitted).

9 In Iqbal, the Supreme Court clarified the two-step approach district courts are to 10 apply when considering motions to dismiss. First, a district court must accept as true all 11 well-pled factual allegations in the complaint; however, legal conclusions are not entitled 12 to the assumption of truth. Id. at 679. Mere recitals of the elements of a cause of action, 13 supported only by conclusory statements, do not suffice. Id. at 678. Second, a district 14 court must consider whether the factual allegations in the complaint allege a plausible 15 claim for relief. Id. at 679. A claim is facially plausible when the plaintiff’s complaint 16 alleges facts that allow a court to draw a reasonable inference that the defendant is 17 liable for the alleged misconduct. Id. at 678. Where the complaint does not permit the 18 court to infer more than the mere possibility of misconduct, the complaint has “alleged—19 but not shown—that the pleader is entitled to relief.” Id. at 679 (internal quotation marks 20 omitted). When the claims in a complaint have not crossed the line from conceivable to 21 plausible, the complaint must be dismissed. Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570.

22 IV. DISCUSSION

23 A. Choice of Law<sup>1</sup>

24 When considering a case founded on diversity, federal courts must apply the 25 substantive law of the forum state. Erie Railroad Co. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 78-80

27 <sup>1</sup>The parties initially failed to brief the choice of law issue. On April 11, 2013, the 28 Court ordered the parties to submit supplemental briefings on the issue, which the Court relies on in reaching its conclusion. (Dkt. nos. 23, 31 and 32.)

1 (1938). Pursuant to Nevada choice of law rules concerning personal injury actions, the 2 local law of the state where the injury occurred determines the rights and liabilities of the 3 parties, unless some other state has a more significant relationship to the occurrence 4 and the parties. Gen. Motors Corp. v. Eighth Judicial Dist., 135 P.3d 111, 117 (Nev.
5 2006) (citing Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws § 146 (1971)). Section 146 of 6 the Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws defines “personal injury” as “either 7 physical harm or mental disturbance, such as fright and shock, resulting from physical 8 harm or from threatened physical harm or other injury to oneself or to another.” More 9 than one injury can arise from a single event. Wyeth v. Rowatt, 244 P.3d 765, 776 (Nev.
10 2010).

11 In Wyeth, the Nevada Supreme Court considered which state law governs in an 12 action involving an injury that could have occurred in multiple states. 244 P.3d at 775-13 777. The plaintiffs in Wyeth developed breast cancer after taking hormone replacement 14 pills manufactured by the defendant. Id. at 770. The plaintiffs began taking the pills in 15 other states for seven to fourteen years before moving to Nevada, where they continued 16 taking the pills and were diagnosed with breast cancer. Id. The Nevada Supreme Court 17 held that the place of injury is “the state where the last element necessary for a claim 18 against the tortfeasor occurs . . . .” Id. at 776. The Court further held that the diagnosis 19 was the last element necessary to assert a claim against the defendants. Id. at 777. As 20 such, because the diagnosis occurred in Nevada, Nevada law governed the action. Id.
21 The Court reached this conclusion by reasoning that until a slow-developing disease is 22 detected, there is no injury to redress. Id. at 776. Moreover, the Court held that Nevada 23 had a more significant relationship to the parties than other states because the plaintiffs 24 resided and were diagnosed in Nevada, and experienced emotional and physical 25 distress from the treatments they received in Nevada. Id. at 777.

26 Nevada’s choice of law principles dictate that the Court apply California law in 27 this case. Plaintiff avers that she is unable to ascertain the state where she suffered her 28 injury. She states that she and Defendant had intercourse multiple times in Nevada and

1 California before, during, and after her positive diagnosis of HSV II. (Dkt. no. 32 at 2.) It 2 is unclear whether Plaintiff will ultimately be able to determine the location of the injury.
3 However, Plaintiff received her positive diagnosis in California. Without this diagnosis, 4 Plaintiff could not have known that she was infected with a sexually transmitted disease.
5 The Court therefore holds that Plaintiff's injury occurred in California because it is the 6 location of the diagnosis giving rise to the injury and the state where the last element 7 (damages) of the claims occurred. Additionally, Plaintiff has alleged that following the 8 transmission and diagnosis, she suffered severe emotional distress from her infection, 9 incurring additional injury in California.

10 Defendant argues that the location of the injury must be Nevada because Plaintiff 11 alleges that she was diagnosed with the disease only after having intercourse with 12 Defendant in Las Vegas. Even though the transmission may have occurred in Nevada, 13 the location of the conduct is irrelevant to this choice of law analysis. See Renfro v. Eli 14 Lilly & Co., 686 F.2d 642, 645 (8th Cir. 1982) (holding that the injury occurred in 15 California, the state where the cancer had been discovered, even though the conduct 16 causing the plaintiff to obtain cancer occurred in Missouri).

17 Moreover, California has a more significant relationship to the parties than does 18 Nevada. Plaintiff resides in California, and the parties began their relationship in 19 California. Because Defendant has not demonstrated that Nevada has a more 20 significant relationship to the parties, the Court concludes that California law applies to 21 this case. See Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws § 146.

22 The Court must next determine whether Plaintiff has sufficiently pled her claims 23 under California law.

24
25 B. Statute of Limitations Defense to Plaintiff's Negligence and IIED Claims

26 Defendant argues that Plaintiff's negligence and IIED claims should be dismissed 27 because they were not asserted within the applicable statutes of limitations. "Statutes 28 of limitation are considered substantive rather than procedural; therefore a federal court

1 sitting on a diversity case must use the limitations law of the forum state.” Flowers v.
 2 Carville, 292 F. Supp. 2d 1225, 1229 (D. Nev. 2003) aff’d, 161 Fed. App’x 697 (9th Cir.
 3 2006) (citing Alberding v. Brunzell, 601 F.2d 474, 476 (9th Cir.1979); Klaxon Co. v.
 4 Stentor Electric Mfg. Co., 313 U.S. 487, 496-97 (1941)). As such, this Court must 5 interpret and apply the California statutes of limitations to Plaintiff’s negligence and IIED 6 claims.

7 The statute of limitations for both negligence and IIED in California is two years.
 8 Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 335.1. Generally, the date of a cause of action is measured from 9 when the injury occurs. Jolly v. Eli Lilly Co., 751 P.2d 923, 926 (Cal. 1988). California, 10 however, has adopted the “discovery rule” in which “the accrual date of a cause of 11 action is delayed until the plaintiff is aware of her injury and its negligent cause.” Rivas 12 v. Safety-Kleen Corp., 98 Cal. App. 4th 218, 224 (2002) (quoting Jolly, 751 P.2d at 926).
 13 The discovery rule measures the date of injury from the time a plaintiff discovers, or has 14 reason to discover, the cause of action. Id. at 225. Thus, the limitations periods here 15 began accruing once Plaintiff “has notice or information of circumstances to put a 16 reasonable person on inquiry . . . .” Id. When a suspicion of wrongdoing arises, a 17 plaintiff must find the facts underlying the possible cause of action; a plaintiff cannot wait 18 for the facts to find them. Id. Additionally, a plaintiff is held to “knowledge that could 19 reasonably be discovered through investigation open to [the plaintiff],” and thus does 20 not need to have actual knowledge of the facts giving rise to her potential claim. Id.

21 In his Motion to Dismiss, Defendant argues that the statute of limitations began to 22 run in July of 2010, when Plaintiff began experiencing symptoms similar to an HSV II 23 infection. However, the Complaint alleges that Plaintiff was diagnosed in December 24 2010. (Dkt. no. 1 at ¶ 10.) The date of diagnosis is the relevant date here; the statute of 25 limitations was triggered when Plaintiff was diagnosed, not merely when she 26 experienced certain symptoms associated with HSV II. See Graveline v. Select Comfort 27 Retail Corp., 871 F. Supp. 2d 1033, 1038 (E.D. Cal. 2012) (holding that the statute of 28 limitations did not begin accruing until after plaintiffs discovered the cause of their

1 alleged injuries, not when they began experiencing symptoms associated with their 2 injuries).

3 Even were Defendant correct that the date in which Plaintiff suspected she 4 contracted HSV II was the relevant date here, Plaintiff does not allege that she 5 suspected she had contracted HSV II before December 2010. Defendant cites to e-mail 6 evidence stating that Plaintiff was suspicious she had the virus in July 2011, but the 7 Court does not consider these documents on a motion to dismiss. This is because 8 generally, a court may not consider any material beyond the pleadings in ruling on a 9 Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss. United States v. Ritchie, 342 F.3d 903, 907 (9th Cir.
10 2003). There are three exceptions to this rule, none of which are applicable here. See 11 Lee v. Los Angeles, 250 F.3d 668, 688-89 (9th Cir. 2001) (describing the exceptions: 12 “‘1) a court may consider documents properly submitted as part of the complaint on a 13 motion to dismiss; 2) if documents are not physically attached to the complaint, 14 incorporation by reference is proper if the document’s authenticity . . . is not contested’ 15 and ‘the plaintiff’s complaint necessarily relies’ on them; and 3) a court may take judicial 16 notice of ‘matters of public record.’”) (internal citations omitted). In fact, “[a] motion to 17 dismiss based on the running of the statute of limitations period may be granted only if 18 the assertions of the complaint, read with the required liberality, would not permit the 19 plaintiff to prove that the statute was tolled.” Bancroft Life & Cas. ICC, Ltd. v. Scolari, 20 No. 3:11-CV-5017, 2012 WL 4514361, at *3 (W.D. Wash. Oct. 2, 2012) (quoting 21 Supermail Cargo, Inc. v. United States, 68 F.3d 1204, 1206–07 (9th Cir. 1995)). This is 22 not the case here.

23 Plaintiff filed this lawsuit on September 19, 2012. She alleges that she was 24 diagnosed in December 2012. Therefore, looking solely to the allegations contained in 25 the Complaint, the two-year California statute of limitations for IIED and negligence 26 does not bar this suit.

28 ///

1           C.     Negligence

2           To bring a negligence claim under California law, a plaintiff must show “duty; 3     breach of duty; legal cause; and damages.” Friedman v. Merck & Co., 107 Cal. App.
4     4th 454, 463 (2003). “The threshold element of a cause of action for negligence is the 5     existence of a duty to use due care toward an interest of another that enjoys legal 6     protection against unintentional invasion.” Paz v. State of Cal., 994 P.2d 975, 981 (Cal.
7     2000). Defendant owed Plaintiff a duty under California law. California Health and 8     Safety Code § 120290 provides that “[a]ny person afflicted with any contagious, 9     infections, or communicable disease who willfully exposes himself or herself to another 10    person . . . is guilty of a misdemeanor.” Defendant allegedly violated this statute by 11    transmitting HSV II to Plaintiff. When a court adopts conduct proscribed by a statute as 12    the standard of care for negligence, negligence is presumed when the statute is 13    violated. Spates v. Dameron Hosp. Assn., 114 Cal. App. 4th 208, 218 (2003).

14           Negligence per se creates a presumption of negligence if four elements are 15    established: “(1) the defendant violated a statute, ordinance, or regulation of a public 16    entity; (2) the violation proximately caused death or injury to person or property; (3) the 17    death or injury resulted from an occurrence of the nature of which the statute, 18    ordinance, or regulation was designed to prevent; and (4) the person suffering the death 19    or the injury to his person or property was one of the class of persons for whose 20    protection the statute, ordinance, or regulation was adopted.” Galvez v. Frields, 88 Cal.
21    App. 4th 1410, 1420 (2001).

22           Plaintiff has alleged sufficient facts showing that Defendant violated § 20290 of 23    the California Health and Safety Code by willfully exposing himself to her. Plaintiff 24    alleges that Defendant knew he was infected with HSV II while in a relationship with 25    Plaintiff, and that Defendant and Plaintiff engaged in unprotected sex prior to Plaintiff 26    being diagnosed with HSV II.

27           Plaintiff has also sufficiently alleged that Defendant’s willful exposure was the 28    proximate cause of her contracting the disease. Plaintiff alleges that she was not

1 infected with HSV II prior to commencing the relationship with Defendant, and that 2 Plaintiff did not have sexual relations with any other men during their relationship (dkt.
 3 no. 1 at ¶¶ 13-14), giving rise to the reasonable inference that she contracted the 4 disease from Defendant.

5 Additionally, Plaintiff has alleged facts suggesting that her injury is the type which 6 the statute was designed to prevent. Section 120290 prohibits the transmission of 7 infectious diseases, and Plaintiff alleges that Defendant transmitted an infectious 8 venereal disease to her. (Dkt. no. 1 at ¶ 19.)

9 Defendant contends that Plaintiff's allegations demonstrate that she could not 10 have contracted HSV II from Defendant. Defendant points out that Plaintiff (1) did not 11 become aware of her infection until nine months after commencing the sexual 12 relationship with Defendant, despite HSV II's short incubation period; (2) may have 13 contracted the disease from a prior relationship; and (3) apologized to Defendant for 14 accusing him of giving her HSV II. (Dkt. no. 13 at 10-11.) Plaintiff's late diagnosis does 15 not render the allegation that Defendant transmitted the disease to her implausible.
 16 Defendant's argument regarding the apology relies on documents outside the 17 pleadings, and the argument is therefore inappropriate on a motion to dismiss. And 18 while it is possible Plaintiff received the venereal disease from another person, this does 19 not warrant dismissal; at this stage of the litigation, Plaintiff must only show that it is 20 plausible that Defendant is responsible for the transmission. See Iqbal, 550 U.S. at 555.

21 Taking Plaintiff's allegations in the light most favorable to her with all reasonable 22 inferences drawn in her favor, she has alleged enough to state a claim of negligence 23 per se.

24 D. Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress

25 In order to establish a claim for IIED under California law, a plaintiff must allege: 26 "(1) extreme and outrageous conduct by the defendant with the intention of causing, or 27 reckless disregard of the probability of causing, emotional distress; (2) suffering severe 28 or extreme emotional distress; and (3) actual and proximate causation of the emotional

1 distress by the defendant's outrageous conduct." Ess v. Eskaton Props., Inc., 97 Cal.
 2 App. 4th 120, 129 (2002). Conduct is outrageous when it is "so extreme as to exceed 3 all bounds of that usually tolerated in a civilized community." Id. Moreover, the conduct 4 must be intentional such that it is calculated to cause mental distress to a very serious 5 degree. Id. at 130.

6 Despite Defendant's arguments to the contrary, the Complaint sufficiently alleges 7 a claim for IIED. It alleges that Defendant willfully withheld knowledge of his condition 8 from Plaintiff while the two engaged in a sexually active relationship, and alleges that 9 Defendant's conduct caused Plaintiff to suffer extreme emotional distress. (Dkt. no 1 at 10 ¶¶ 24, 26.) It is certainly plausible that Defendant's decision to knowingly withhold 11 information about his STD, and then to engage in sexual intercourse with Plaintiff and 12 ultimately transmit the STD to Plaintiff, could cause her to suffer extreme emotional 13 distress. Such conduct, if true, is outside the boundaries of decency deemed 14 acceptable by society. See Ess, 97 Cal. App. 4th at 129. Plaintiff has pled the elements 15 necessary to support her cause of action, and this claim survives Defendant's Motion.

16 E. Fraudulent Misrepresentation and Punitive Damages

17 To assert a claim of fraudulent misrepresentation in California, a plaintiff must 18 show: "(a) misrepresentation (false representation, concealment, or nondisclosure); (b) 19 knowledge of falsity (or 'scienter'); (c) intent to defraud, i.e., to induce reliance; (d) 20 justifiable reliance; and (e) resulting damage." Lovejoy v. AT & T Corp., 92 Cal. App. 4th 21 85, 93 (2001) (citations omitted).

22 Fraud claims must meet a heightened pleading standard under Federal Rule of 23 Civil Procedure 9(b), which requires a party to "state with particularity the circumstances 24 constituting fraud." The plaintiff must plead with particularity "the who, what, when, 25 where, and how of the misconduct charged." Vess v. Ciba-Geigy Corp. USA, 317 F.3d 26 1097, 1106 (9th Cir. 2003) (internal quotation marks omitted). However, when a plaintiff 27 fails to plead fraud with particularity, "leave to amend should be granted if it appears at 28 all possible that the plaintiff can correct the defect." Balistreri v. Pacifica Police Dep't,

1 901 F.2d 696, 701 (9th Cir. 1988). If allegations concerning fraud do not comply with 2 Rule 9(b), the court should “‘disregard’ those averments, or ‘strip’ them from the claim.”
3 Vess, 317 F.3d at 1105.

4 Plaintiff alleges that Defendant informed her that he was not infected with any 5 sexually transmitted diseases and that he was regularly tested in order to induce 6 Plaintiff to have sex. (Dkt. no. 1 at ¶ 30.) Plaintiff further alleges that Defendant “at all 7 material times” knew that he was infected with HSV II. (Dkt. no. 1 at ¶ 8). The 8 Complaint also alleges that Plaintiff contracted HSV II as a result of Defendant’s 9 inducement. But while Plaintiff has sufficiently pled the elements of fraud as well as the 10 content of the misrepresentations, Plaintiff has not identified the time or place the 11 misrepresentations occurred. For example, the Complaint does not allege precisely 12 when Defendant told Plaintiff he did not have HSV II. Thus, Plaintiff’s allegations fail to 13 meet the heightened pleading standards of Rule 9(b). This cause of action is 14 accordingly dismissed without prejudice.

15 Moreover, Plaintiff’s request for punitive damages, which she seeks in 16 connection only with her claim for fraudulent misrepresentation (dkt. no. 1 at ¶ 33), must 17 be dismissed without prejudice as well.

18 19 V. DEFENDANT’S MOTION TO POSTPONE ALL DISCOVERY AND INITIAL DISCOVERY PLANNING PROCEEDING PENDING MOTION TO DISMISS

20 Defendants asks the Court to postpone discovery until after deciding the Motion 21 to Dismiss, and if the case is not dismissed, until a reasonable time after the Court’s 22 decision. Defendant argues that good cause exists because he is a working father, has 23 no insurance to cover this claim, and has little money to cover his legal fees.

24 This Order disposes of Defendant’s pending motion. Therefore, Defendant’s 25 request is largely mooted.

26 VI. CONCLUSION

27 IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that Defendant’s Motion to Dismiss (dkt. no. 25) 28 is GRANTED in part and DENIED in part. The fraudulent misrepresentation claim and

1 related request for punitive damages are DISMISSED WITHOUT PREJUDICE. The 2 Motion is DENIED in all other respects.

3 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Defendant's Motion to Stay Discovery (dkt. no.
4 28) is DENIED as moot.

5 DATED THIS 25th day of April 2013.
